

CALIFORNIA STATE UNIVERSITY
SAN FRANCISCO

1600 HOLLOWAY AVENUE • SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA, 94132

Nov. 25, 84

Dear Pat and Dan -

I've mailed you several things to read. Hopefully they're a little more coherent than I am when primed with wine, scotch, etc.. I think the most painless way to get a feel for the argument I'm presenting might be to read the material in the following order:

1. Of Visionaries and Tacticians - Winter 1973-74 issue of the Journal
2. Love and Lust & Revolution - Winter 1972-73 issue
(Then read the letter to Sally Gearheart. Sally is a feminist who responded to this essay. Her comments are quoted in my letter, and I think the dialogue will give you a better feel of what I'm attempting to say.)
3. Then "Reconstituting America" - Winter 1971-72 and the dialogue with Art DiQuattro which followed re this article - in the Spring 1973 issue.
(Incidentally, Dan, I'd be interested in your comments on the short essay "Under the Bridge at Watergate" - in the Winter 71-2 issue. I'm only very loosely committed to the ideas expressed therein. A little counter info could convince me they're far off base. Perhaps you could provide it.)
4. Some of the articles in the 1968 special. The first half of "Reconstituting America" is in the 68 special, and some of the other essays might be of interest, perhaps "A New Vocabulary for the New Left."
In the Summer and Fall 1973 issues you'll find a two part essay on the Russian Rev. - This too should help.

If after all that you're interested in the essential argument, I can furnish you with quite a few other things to read.

I was glad to meet both of you -- have long respected the integrity you've shown. Hank & I will be pressuring you re a class appearance, Dan. Have a nice thanksgiving.

Warm regards

ps - I was out for a bike ride on Sat and someone driving in from Marin yelled to me. I yelled back - but wasn't sure who it was I greeted. Thought it might have been the two of you